Sections 2 - 8 belong to this lecture. This course requires registration for a lab and/or discussion section. Students will be automatically registered for this lecture section when registering for the pertinent lab and/or discussion section. Students should also be registered for Chemistry 1225, General Chemistry Lab II. Supplemental Instruction (SI) is attached to this section. SI provides free, organized group study sessions in which students actively focus on course content, test preparation, and study skills. SI is facilitated by trained student SI leaders. SI session times are determined the first week of class. See <http://learningcenter.utah.edu/> for more information.

3D computer animation is a powerful tool for scientific communication and artistic explorations. In biology, animation can be used to visualize complex events that are too small to see. This course will focus on creating animations of biological processes, particularly at the molecular and cellular scale. Students will use Maya, Aftereffects, and scientific software, utilizing Maya dynamic animation/FX, MEL scripts, basic rigging, Arnold shading, and realistic lighting and rendering. Projects will involve working with biological researchers at the U to develop scientific narratives through animated images. Prerequisite: Film 2600 Introduction to Animation and basic knowledge in Maya interface and animation. Please contact Lien Fan Shen lienfan.shen@utah.edu for further information and inquiry.

Sections 2-10 belong to this lecture. This course requires registration for a discussion section. Students will be automatically registered for this lecture section when registering for the pertinent discussion section. Supplemental Instruction (SI) is attached to this section. SI provides free, organized group study sessions in which students actively focus on course content, test preparation, and study skills. SI is facilitated by trained student SI leaders. SI session times are determined the first week of class. See http://learningcenter.utah.edu/ for more information.
